The immigration decision to detain someone is an administrative decision made by immigration officers; not a decision by a judge as part of the process of the criminal justice system. Those taken away to be detained can be held in detention centres, officially known as Immigration Removal Centres (IRC). However, the name of the facility is misleading as many detainees are held in the centres with no prospect of being removed or deported from the UK.

Many individuals argue that illegal immigrants do not have rights when they unlawfully enter into the United States. However, detained immigrants maintain basic human rights. As a result, they have the right to basic necessities, including food, water, and clothing, and suitable living conditions. In addition, detained immigrants have the right to obtain legal representation.

Immigration detention is the policy of holding individuals suspected of visa violations, illegal entry or unauthorized arrival, as well as those subject to deportation and removal until a decision is made by immigration authorities to grant a visa and release them into the community, or to repatriate them to their country of departure. Mandatory detention refers to the practice of compulsorily detaining or imprisoning people seeking political asylum, or who are considered to be illegal immigrant
